THINKING OUT LOUD

By H. M. L.

The knuckles of John L. Lewis have been severely rapped. But his big ham fist still threatens U. S. economy. We don't use a great deal of coal here in Nevada County, but if we were to lose what we do consume here, it would leave a lot of us very cool in the winter time.

And John L. Lewis need not call a strike at the end of this month. The miners with great unanimity can quit work as individuals and then ask us what we are going to do about it? We can be sure the miners are not in a pleasant mood. The $700,000 to which the fine against them, not against Lewis, finally dwindled, is only a drop in the bucket to their accumulated "war" chest. The unions themselves refer to their treasuries as war chests. and most of them mean just that. They have the money back of them for a considerable vacation.

When we reflect that the U. S. Supreme Court, with one exception, was named by the late President Roosevelt, who had broken with Lewis, and whom Lewis tried to defeat by backing Wendell Willkie, we need not be surprised at the decision. After all the U. S. Supreme Court is composed of nine human beings. Their decision is, insofar as a layman may judge. legally correct. The government of the United States must maintain itself against all attacks.

As we see it, the U. S. government, cannot in peace time coerce any man or group of men to work if they do not wish to do so. They may not strike but they can, acting with unanimity cease work as individuals, and then the real question of what constitutes sufficient pay will have to be answered, Lewis or no Lewis.

The Sacramento Bee for several years has advocated compulsory arbitration in settlement of labor disputes. We are beginning to think that may be the only recourse. In cases affecting the public interest. If the issue were confined to disputes that effect the public interest, we are bound to ask, does not every strike affect the public interest. The answer is that all of them do, but that some more vitally affect the public interest than others.

Workers who bring us electric power, light, heat, water, transportation, and food, are perfonming a service basically essential. Indeed few of the population can be indepenent of them. A few farmers perhaps could exist for a limited time without such services. Even they would have to be men patterned after the early pioneers.

We believe that an arbitration board, set up by all the people, could be as irresponsible as are the courts, in its decisions. Such boards could step in when collective bargaining fails. This, of course, ultimately becomes coercion. But as a matter of fact all of us yield up some rights in order to live peaceably with our fellow men. Whether the right to strike is one of those, which under special conditions should be yielded, is a matter for debate. It would not in any event affect the individual right to cease work, anytime the conditions of, or the pay for, work unacceptable. We are aware that this makes a tenuous distinction. If a man will not work ordinarily he will not eat.

However we doubht if the Supreme Court has settled the basic issue, of whether, considering the high cost of living tht coal miners are getting enough pay, when their average earnings was, or is, around $42 a week, even though their possible earnings under the present set up of hours, regular pay and overtime pay, could amount to $75 week. The work itself undoubtedly is too arduous to permit the average miner devoting 54 hours a week to earn $75 a week even if the opportunity at all times were wide open.

SNOW CONDITIONS ON HIGHWAY 40 ARE FINE FOR SKIING NOW

The best skiing of the season is available now to skiers, according to the winter sports committee of the California State Chamber of Commerce. Recent storms resulted in heavy desopsits of snow—in fact the depths are the highest reported this year at many localities. Johnsville, for the first time this year, reports skiing excellent. At Lake Tahoe, Highway 40 and Highway 50 areas conditions are extremely good. This is the time of the year continues the committee, when the experienced skier is making plans for the spring season, when clear skies are the rule rather than the exception. In another week or two, skiers will begin to appear in spring costume, stripped to the barest necessities. Also, reservations are more easily made than during the winter months.

Snow depths and road information as reported by the winter sports committee of the California State Chamber of Commerce, compiled from wire and telephone reports from private resorts, the national forests, national parks and the U. S. weather bueau. Depths reported are deptrs on the sni hills and not on level ground. While some roads are reported clear it is essential that chains be carried by every car at this time of the year.. Condition of snow is not reported because of constant change and ski wax will take care of any kind of snow encountered. At all areas with sufficient snow, tows are operating..

Highway 40 (Donner Summit)—Emigrant Gap, Auburn Ski Club, Cisco, Rainbow——no report.

Soda Springs——68 in, 3 in. new, good.

Norden, Sugar Bowl, Donner Summit, 72 in, 3in. new, good.

Truckee, 48 in. 2in. new, good..

ENGLE FAILS TO VOTE ON BUDGET REDUCTION BILL

WASHINGTON: California Representative Clair Engle, Second District, recently failed to vote on a resolution to cut the budget $6 billion. The ballot involved a choice between government economy or continuing on the dangerous path to government insolvencey.

Though Engle failed to take a stand, other Democrats charged that such economy would force injurious reduction of the arme forces. Republicans pushd through the budget cut by a vote of 239 to 159.

Republicns replied by pointing out numerous examples of gross extravagances and waste in bureaucratic Washington and the armed services. Spearheading Republican debate were War II veterans in GOP ranks who had witnessed military extravagances first hand. Declared Rep. Albert Reeves, Missouri War II veteran.

REMARKABLE CASE OF SALES IN COURT AGAIN

NEVADA CITY: Walter A. (Chick) Sales, 30, will go on trial in the superior court today on charges of kidnapping. Judge James Snell will preside..

Sales was charged with kidnapping in a complaint signed by Geno Giovannoni, Truckee business man who charged that the former local railroad fireman forced Giovannoni's wife, Mary, to accompany him in an automobile at the point of a gun after threatening several railroad employees at the Truckee roundhouse where Mrs. Giovannoni was employed on December 22.

The defendant had previously been arrested twice on similar charges growing out of his alleged infatuation for Mrs. Giovannoni, the first time on August 20 when he was accused of exhibiting a deadly weapon and was sentenced by Justice of the Peace R. N. Little to serve six months in the county jail and pay a $500 fine.

Later he was released and returned to Truckee where he was accused of kidnapping Mrs. Giovannoni on October 21. The charges were dropped at that time but Sales was returned to jail for violating his parole.

On December 22 he allegedly left the Nevada County jail without permission and returned to Truckee where for the third time he was accused of forcing Mrs. Giovannoni to accompany him. A ruse by the taxi driver quickly brought him into the arms of the law and the current charge was filed and he was held to answer.

In the event of his escaping the kidnap charge, Sales is said to be facing a count of jail breaking.

District Attorney Ward Sheldon will prosecute the coming case and Frank G. Finnegan is the defense attorney.

He recommended the cooperation of Nevada, Sierra, Placer and El Dorado counties to write and preserve the elements of early day history in libraries and museums.

Phillip Bradley, of Grass Valley, and a pioneer in the development of the famous Bradley mining interests among the gold fields of the Pacific Coast, accompanied Mr. Stevens and spoke interestingly of his experiences fifty years ago in Auburn. He told also of early days in Georgetown, where he was born.

The ladies and guests present were garbed in the colorful attire of the pioneer period. Mr. Bradley commented particularly on the charm and beauty of the girls and ladies of Auburn accented by their attractive costumes.

CONSERVATION

By Dr. Robert C. Miller, Director, California Academ yof Science

Every citizen of the United States is now more conservation conscious. War brought to us abruptly and uncomfortably the realization that the resources of our country are not inexhaustible.

Reared in the comfortable tradition that ours is the richest nation in the world, we were first shocked and unbelieving when told that we had not enough of various important commodities to supply our armed forces and at the same time sustain our normal way of life.

We have learned to conserve. We have taken rationing in stride. We point the finger of scorn at black markets.

We learn to conserve in small ways, doing it earnestly and conscientiously, and this is all to the good. We should be better off if in times of peace we maintain the type of thrift we developed under the stress of war. But are we really conservation conscious in the larger sense, as we shall need to be in the years to come?

The national park service had a real struggle to prevent prospecting, grazing, the cutting of timber, and other types of exploitation in national parks and national monuments—all under the plea of special needs in time of war. It is true that war makes special demands and that if we lost the war our resources would be less than worthless to us. But it is also true, that in any case in which we sacrifice a natural resource without imperative need, we are selling the birthright of future generations.

It has come to be recognized as one of the obligations of good citizenship when we eat lunch at a picnic ground not to throw papers or tin cans about or to pluck flowers and carry them away, or otherwise to deface the landscape. This is an epitome of conservation. For conservation is not a cult,, it is only the Golden Rule in action. Conservation is the recognition of the right of those who come after us to profit by the bounty of nature as we have profited by it, and to enjoy the beauty we have enjoyed.

JUST WONDERIN'

I wonder if the avifaunal penguin
Stands on an ice floe with his stately mate,
In answering her agitated queries,
Finds he has only these few facts to state;
"From whence they come, these creatures we call menguins.
I must congers I cannot tell you dear,
But judging from their actions and appearance,
Their realm must be preposterusly queer."

I wonder what the upright penguins of Little America think of the Byrd expedition; it may be that they regard it as an invasion, still I would like to know what they think of it.

Perhaps you are one of those who will sniff scornfully and say, "birds can't think," but in that, I believe you to be wrong. I have seen both birds and beasties employing the powers of reason in solving their problems and when a bird, a beast or a man is reasoning, they're thinking, aren't they?

Penguins, I have been told, are friendly fowls, unafraid of uncouth strangers. If my information is correct, they never kill for the pleasure of killing, neither do they organize armies for the purpose of destroying each other wholesale. What a lot these innocent birds have to learn from their human brothers.

I wonder if the penguins will be treated with kindly consideration, or will they find to their dismay that menguins, steal their eggs, kill their young and are in fact fearsomely penguinivorous.

Man's vaunted dominion over the birds and beasts has never been markedly kindly, and the gentle and lovely things of nature, tend to retreat and often disappear before the advance of the lords of creation. Just at this time, I'm feeling concerned for the future of Little America's upstanding avifaunals. I find myself hoping that the expeditionary forces will curb some of man's inherent propensities and give the native swimming birds a fair deal.

I wonder why one of the ancients advised us to "go to the ant, consider her ways and be wise." He couldn't have known his ants. You don't have to go to that little insect, he comes to you in numbers, and makes an intolerable nuisance of himself. He is a thief and a robber, a destroyer of mental equanimity, orderliness and cleanliness. He desecrates the pantry shelves and drives the meticulous home maker to the verge of insanity. The ways of the ant are unbearable; following his ways would lead the world into a state of chaos far worse than the one we are now enduring..

The insufferable ant organizes vast armies and makes war upon his kind. Go to the ant if you wish, consider his ways, but as for me, I am determined never to follow his nefarious example. After all, the ancients were ancients and their opinions are often unacceptable to a modern scientific world.

BROAD STREET

By Harley M. Leete, Jr.

Where are the heads of the bigger business houses in town, when Chamber of Commerce meetings are called? Are they too busy to look after their own welfare? The best thing that could happen to Nevada City would be for business to reciprocate with a little time and energy, for the efforts which a little nucleus of enthusiasts, centered around the President and Secretay, carry on.

Sure, everyone chips in with dues. Our secretary sees to that. But with money as cheap as it is thest days, just exactly how much can we expect in improvement for twelve dollars a year? Think it over. How much can twelve dollars buy you in any other line? Community progress and achievement are not on sale at a bargain counter.

For the amount of co-operation and work that have been contributed by the town, the results that have come out of our chamber have been mgiht satisfactory.

Business men have even said, "Aw, they don't do much at the Chamber of Commerce." Next time we hear that, let's reply, "What do you mean, "they"? You don't do much. Where were you at the last meeting? You working hard on any committees?"

(NOTE: Tuesday, March 11, the chamber meets at 12:15 at lunch at the National Hotel. A vitally important topic, PARKING METERS, will be discussed. If you've got any interest, one way or the other—better be there. Better be ther anyhow).

Mighty glad to hear that the city employees got a raise. Very sensible attitude on the part of the ity council. A happy workingman is a good worker, and with the still-climbing cost of liviug, salaries go out of style almost as fast as women's clothes.

If a person had a nickel for every word that's been spoken on youth recreation, he could give the money to the city to put in operation that chlorination plant which they bought but don't use. We can dream, can't we.

Speaking of youth recreation. Forming a sensible program must be complex. The boys and girls who go for such a program are just the ones who need it least. The ones who need it are the hardest to interest.

One who attends youth recreation meetings gets the idea that the subject is a merry-go-round. Everybody gets on the carousel, speaks a certain number of words, listens to cheerful but unimportant tunes and gets off again, without having changed the merry-go-round.

This slightly sour analysis does not apply to the handful of workers who are actually doing somethiig about the situation. Furthermore, as Del Powell, the Grass Valley credit man, explained to me the other day, everything has to go through the TALK stage.

Bill Esterly offers an original solution to the slash menace. He suggests building a pulp mill hereabouts to put all that waste to economic use. Bill points out that there's a terrific newsprint shortage so that the product of a pulp mill could be assured an eager market. There you are, some of ou lumbermen who are nervously counting the months or years of Nevada County's lumber future..

IT WILL BE DOOD AGAIN!

This is not Boys' Town, but all you kids from 1 to 100 know the Hughes—"Jo" and Paul—so come on out and meet Cecil at "Kids' Town." This year we will have sand boxes, swings, and a slide board for you little guys and gals and besides that, Mom won't have to stay out there with you for there will be a mighty nice young lady to look after you from 12 noon to 4 p. m. while Mom does her shopping or bridge playing. And besides that we will have candy, pop, peanuts and most anything that you will enjoy and a nice store just for you 'cause you can't come in the club house unless Mom or Pop are with you or you are over twenty-one years old. And believe it or not—we have a pony ring this year where you can spend a dime or more and ride all you want to!

Be sure to tell Mom or Dad that our club house is open to them for parties or dinner for the family. Most important—tell Daddy that he won't have to come in the club house at all if he will come out with you. He can bring his paper and get a nice lawn chair and relax, and if he happens to want a coke or beer, or even a smoke, some one will bring it right to his chair; he won't even have to spend a penny if he doesn't want to. And also tell Mom if she wants to entertain her bridge club or sewing circle that we have some awfully nice tables in the club house and she can order beforehand what she wants served and the whole club house will be hers from 12 noon to 4 P. M. if she wants it.

Just think—just far enough off the highway to be out of danger of traffic and right between two of the best little cities in the world—that is what Paul Hughes is asking you to support. So come on out to the Jopamavi Club for fun for the whole family.

Veterans' News

Veterans who hold National Service Life Insurance term policies may now convert to one or more of the six permanent plans at any time within the term period, the Veterans Administration pointed out today.

Henetofore, an insured veteran had to wait for one year from the effective date of the term policy before he could convert. The change affects members of the armed forces as well as veterans.

Veterans who have never had policies also may now apply directly for one or more of the six permanent plans without first taking out a term policy.

Applicants for new insurance will be required to undergo a physical examination, although poor health, if a result of service, may not be a bar to obtaining a policy. Veterans seeking to reinstate lapsed term policies need only pay two monthly premiums and submit a comparative health statement.

Veterans who plan eventually to convert their term National Service Life Insurance may choose from six types of permanent policies. These are ordinary life, 30 payment life, 20 payment life, 20 year endowment and endowments at age 60 and age 65.

The chief advantage of the ordinary life plan is that it gives maximum protection at the lowest possible rate of premium.

Contrary to popular belief you do not have to pay premiums on ordinary life all of your life in order ta be insured. You can stop payment at the end of any year and elect to take a paid up policy for a lesser amount of insurance. For example, the annual premium for a $10,000 ordinary life policy issued at the age 25 is $162.20. At the end of one year the paid up insurance value, if you decide to descontinue further payments, is $237.80. At the end of ten years it is $2356.40 and in 40 years it is $7882.90.

For those individuals who can save larger amounts of money each ear, 30 payment and 20 payment life plans permit their policies to be paid up for the full amount in 30 or 20 years. For example, a 30 payment life policy for $10,000 issued at age 25 carries a premium of $197.70 per year and is paid up for the full $10,000 in 30 years.

All of these plans of permanent insurance have cash values. After the first year of payment you can borrow up to 94 per cent on the cash value of your policy. Loans on such cash values have saved many a man from financial disaster more than once in his life time..

Endowment policies will be discussed in next week's veterans news column.

Q: I'm getting out of the hospital next week. I have a 30 per cent disability, but I can work and I have a job offer.. Will I lose my disability compensation if I take this job?

A: You are fully entitled to disability compensation whether you take the job or not. And by the way, it has been demonstrated that disabled veterans make better than average employees when they find jobs suited for them.

Q: Am I eligible for education or training if I was in the army less than 90 days during World War II and was discharged for a service connected injury?

A: Yes.

A FINE POEM BY MRS. ADELINE CONNER

Adeline Merriam Conner, writer of numerous poems and articles, has again expressed her interest in conservation by writing several poems apropos to Conservation Week, March 7 to 14. Writer Conner's home is at The Cedars, near North San Juan within the Tahoe National Forest, and her love for the outdoors has been given expression both in current publications and in the book of her writings..

One of the poems especially written for Conservation Week follows:

UNLEASHED

There are clouds of smoke in the distance,
Smirching the summer sky;
There are sirens wailing loudly
As fire trucks go roaring by.
Thee are innocent woodland creatures
Fleeing in pain and dread,
As black clouds billow upward
And darken the sky overhead.

Devouring flames sweep onward,
Where brave and intrepid men
Recoil as the fiend advances,
Then turn and fight on again.
She flaunts then with cackling laughter
And chokes them with acrid breath—
Her ways are the ways of destructiion,
Her paths are the paths of death.

In a sudden access of fury,
She hurls her brands through the air;
They fall in the wooded canyons
And spot fires are kindled there.
She leaps to a stand of timber
And, "Run!" is the frenzied cry,
"Run, run for your lives, men,
To linger here is to die!"

Grim days and nights of peril,
Then she dies as fire fiend: die,
Licking the ghastly ruins
Left when she thundered by;
But the blackened canyons and hillsides
And the stark, dead forests tell,
Of the wealth of life and beauty
That died in the fire fiend's hell.

Was the fiend unleashed in her fury
And her course of destruction set,
By a spark that fell in a moment
From your lighted cigarette?

METERS BEING ENFORCED IN AUBURN NOW

AUBURN: The enforcement of the parking meter ordinance came in for considerable discussion by the city council at its regular meeting last week.

The practice of increasing the fines for second offenders was criticized by representatives of the chamber of commerce.

They stated there had been a great deal of adverse criticism to the meters received by the chamber and declared the organization was of the opinion that a fine of $1 ought to be fixed for all violations.

City Attorney K. D. Robinson said the ordinance permitted fines up to $500 or six months imprisonment for violations, but declared such severe penalties would obviously not be imposed unless some extreme case occurred.

Police Judge C. F. Richter said that second offenders had been paying fines of $2.50 for meter violations.

The council took no action limiting the penalties but indicate that a new violation ticket now being prepared would carry a notice that violations would result in a $1 fine.
